Engagement Overview

The following items will be part of the process we tailor for your session. Each item is designed to meet the specific needs of your team.

Implicit Bias: Beyond the Self

Nobody wants to be wrong, but sometimes we are. Most people don't mean to cause harm by the things they say, or don't say. Despite those good intentions, there are times when an important opportunity is missed because of an invisible thief called "bias." Bias can cause a blind spot in everyday situations, especially when you know enough to believe you are right, but not enough to know that you could be wrong. In the public health arena, where care impacts the most vulnerable in our communities, the threat of missing those opportunities to connect are intensely high.

This 2-hour interactive workshop will take learners through a brief level-setting of what they know. From there, we will explore methods for uncovering what we don't know in the arena of human interaction. Learners will come away with operational definitions of common terms in the DE&I space, a tool for identifying bias on their own, and opportunities to apply this learning.

Session Objectives: Implicit Bias: Beyond the Self

The primary goals for this session are for you to:

- 1. Engage in the process of building psychological safety as you explore bias.
- 2. Define, and explore terms as they apply to your interaction with others: implicit bias, micro-aggression.
- 3. Use a tool for identifying bias on your own.
- 4. Apply the information to your role at FCPH.

Session Materials

- Electronic Participant Workbook
- Slides for participants to refer to
